History of Ingalls Harbor

Ingalls Iron Works was originally established in 1910, by Robert Ingalls, in Titusville, Alabama, and grew to be the largest steel company in the region. The shipyard in Decatur, Alabama, on the Tennessee River, was started in 1937. As WWII approached, the yard's small size forced Ingalls to look for a bigger site, first in Birmingham, Alabama, then in Chickasaw, Georgia, and finally in Pascagoula, Mississippi. Ingalls' shipbuilding interests were sold to Litton Industries in 1961 then to Trinity Industries in 1981. Trinity closed the Decatur yard due to inspections that revealed the yard's facilities were outdated and would require significant capital investment. Trinity opted to shut down the yard, ending 44 years of shipbuilding in Decatur.

In 2001, the Decatur-Morgan County Hospitality Association voted to self-impose a room occupancy fee, the proceeds of which would be used for tourism product development. With funds generated from this self-imposed room occupancy fee, Ingalls Harbor was built and rests on 27 acres on the south side of the Tennessee River.

Ingalls Harbor has quickly become one of the best launch sites in the nation, attracting many nationally-acclaimed sport fishing tournaments each year including the Bassmaster Elite Series, Wal-Mart FLW Series, American Bass Anglers, and Bassmaster Weekend Series.

Construction began in the summer of 2011 for the new entertainment pavilion at Ingalls Harbor. The 27,000-square foot multi-purpose pavilion more than doubles the city's capacity for hosting large gatherings and opens up the opportunity for even bigger and better things for Decatur and Morgan County allowing the River City to continue to attract national tournaments as well as additional family-friendly activities, corporate events, expositions, outdoor shows, art exhibitions and festivals.

AESTHETIC

The exterior is a mixture of glass, timber, stone and steel. It has a certain refined, rustic feel that continues a pattern established by the City of Decatur in their new, state of the art recreation facilities.

The two massive stone fireplaces bookend a porched wrapped lodge building. The overhead doors are glass and allow light to pass through, even when closed, timber framing is used at the porches.

The actual timber, old growth heart pine was reclaimed and reused from one of Decatur's more historic buildings - the Bailey-Robinson Building. These timbers were in the Bailey-Robinson building for over 100 years.

The interior of the building has smooth finished concrete floors with high arching open ceilings. Multiple roof dormers provide open light from above.

The main structure is exposed and designed to give an "industrial" effect that relates back to the previous history of the Ingalls site as a ship building facility.

The design intent of the interior was to make it as multi-use as possible.

ARTS

Princess Theatre for the Performing Arts

From a livery stable to an art deco showplace, the Princess Theatre has been a North Alabama landmark for more than a century. The original structure, built in 1887 as a hotel's horse stable, was later renovated into a vaudeville playhouse, attracting world-class comedians of the time such as McIntyre and Heath. The current theatre seats up to 670 guests and hosts theatrical and musical performances on its Broadway size stage. Annual events include the Big Band Bash, featuring local, national and internationally-recognized jazz musicians. The Princess Theatre (112 2nd Avenue NE) is open weekdays for backstage and historical tours (call 256-350-1745 to schedule).

Carnegie Visual Arts Center

The Carnegie Visual Arts Center is housed in one of Decatur's most significant historical buildings, the former Carnegie Library. The arts center hosts local, regional, national and international art exhibits and offers art classes for all ages. The Carnegie Library building was built in 1904 by millionaire philanthropist Andrew Carnegie, who helped fund several thousand Carnegie Libraries throughout the world. The Carnegie Visual Arts Center is open Tuesday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Admission to the Carnegie Visual Arts Center (207 Church Street NE) is free. Call 341-0562.

NATURAL SCIENCE MUSEUMS

Cook's Natural Science Museum

Initially used as a training tool for technicians with Cook's Pest Control, Cook's Natural Science Museum has now grown to include over 2,000 interactive, talking, live and touching exhibits housed in a modern 5,000 square foot facility in Decatur. The museum originated from the private insect collection of John R.
